Morning Star Mission Birthday Well Attended

Observance of the 23rd anniversary of the Morning Star Mission, Joliet's and Will County's famous mission, began last Friday night with a special program arranged by Superintendent Peter H. McCarthy, founder and head of the institution.

The past year has been a busy one for the mission. Mr. McCarthy reports, busier in fact than the year previous which constituted a record for the institution.

Men are given lodgings in the basement, meals are distributed and clothing given out, all free of charge. In addition to caring for transients, Superintendent McCarthy has been aiding a number of Joliet families, not receiving help from other organizations, and has been feeding a number of children whose fare at home is insufficient for their needs.

This mission is doing the real, applied Christianity day after day, week after week and year after year along the lines of the Master as He did when He was on earth. Special anniversary services were held last Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights.

True to its name, the Morning Star Mission has truly been a morning star of hope and inspiration to many people and has done a world of good during its 23 years of active ministry to the spiritual and physical needs of thousands of persons of all nations, creed and color.

FORMER NEW LENOX MAN KILLED IN CRASH

Captain James B. Dickson, 32 years old, well known former New Lenox boy, was killed last Thursday near Victoria Falls, Rhodesia, Africa in an airplane crash. He formerly lived in New Lenox and attended the Joliet Township High school.

Captain Dickson was flying the ship "Spirit of Fun" in which Arthur Loew, film producer, has been touring the orient. The plane struck a tree as it was taking off. Dickson was killed and Loew and a companion, Joseph Rosenthal, were injured.

The party was on its way to Johannesburg when the crash occurred. Captain Dickson and his wife sailed for Africa several weeks ago and after the Loew trip he intended to try for the Cape Town to London record.

The Dickson family were residents of New Lenox for a number of years. Capt. Dickson's father is attorney George Dickson, Chicago lawyer. His grandfather was the Rev. Isaiah Villers, pastor of the New Lenox Methodist Episcopal church and at one time prominent in Methodist educational circles.

George B. Dickson, the aviator's father, was once a candidate for governor of Illinois. The family left New Lenox about fifteen years ago, locating in Evanston, their present home.

James Dickson completed grade school in New Lenox and then attended high school in Joliet. He graduated from high school in Evanston, and while still in his teens, enlisted in the aviation corps of the United States army in the World War. He graduated from Northwestern university in 1924. In his college career, Captain Dickson was captain of the swimming team and held several national inter-collegiate tank records.

Emergency Welfare Fund Drive On

The Emergency Welfare Fund campaign for $7,500,000 to meet the needs of Chicago and Cook County relief and welfare agencies, which cannot be met from public funds furnished by state or federal governments, was formally launched in city and county on Monday, Nov. 14.

In Chicago, more than 5,000 workers in the Trades and Industries Division, under the chairmanship of Joseph T. Ryerson, started their work of canvassing every trade and industry. They will seek pledges for a six months period from every employed man and woman, and from every firm, company or corporation.

Before the end of the week, every large community in the county which has not yet marshalled its forces, was expected to complete its organization and join in the county wide campaign now being waged against want and distress.

These public campaigns were launched with $2,019,446, representing large contributions from wealthy individuals, already realized in the Preliminary Gifts campaign, which has been under way for three weeks. This will leave approximately $5,500,000 to be raised in the public drive and, on the basis of present Chicago payrolls which now total approximately $80,000,000, it is estimated that this quota will be reached if one per cent of the total payroll is subscribed for six months.

No definite date has been set for closing the drive since it will be necessary to raise the full $7,500,000 if the emergency needs of the participating charities are to be met and campaign officials are determined to continue the work indefinitely until the complete quota is realized.

Fire Destroys Spencer Barn; Loss $1,500

Fire supposed to have been caused by a tramp destroyed a large barn on the C. Noe farm near Spencer Tuesday night about 8 o'clock. The building burned to the ground. There was no live stock in the barn. Hay, and farm machinery, including a tractor fell prey to the flames. The loss is estimated at $1500, covered by insurance.

This is the third barn that has been destroyed by fire on this farm. A high wind fanned the flames quickly and by the time a bucket brigade could get in operation, the building was doomed. Burning embers set fire to dry grass a quarter of a mile away. A large crowd was attracted by the blaze.

Six weeks ago the farm house was destroyed by fire, caused by a gasoline stove explosion.

The audience was favored with several musical numbers by the 3 Aces and Mr. Leon Tonn, which also were greatly enjoyed. We are fortunate in having such fine talent in our midst.

The Don C. Hall players gave two splendid sketches which afforded much merriment for the evening.

Last but not least was the social hour which is always enjoyed by everyone. Cake and coffee was served. Watch for the date of the next card and bunco party. You don't want to miss a good time.

Mark your calendar for Friday, December 2nd at 1:45 p. m., and attend the next regular meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association.

Due to the illness of Mrs. Bagby's sister, our president will not preside at this meeting, but the chair will be filled by our First Vice-President, Mrs. Betty Burg.

The program committee is getting busy and no doubt a very pleasant surprise is in store.

By the time this paper will be in circulation Thanksgiving Day festivities will have come to a close for another year and Mr. Gobbler will have been "King for a day", and we, as individuals, will have counted our numerous blessings. Each year, as we grow in wisdom, our inventory of blessings will show different credits than for previous years. Did you count among your blessings the fact that you are YOU and that you are a conscientious mother or good friend of a child or children in our Tinley Park school? Do you attend our regular Parent-Teachers Association meetings imparting your knowledge of children to others in turn deriving benefits from the experiences of others; thereby bringing into closer relationship the home and the school? Let's hope this entry will be on the credit side of your ledger for next year for—

Better than grandeur, better than gold,
Than rank and title a thousandfold
Is a healthy body, a mind at ease,
And simple pleasures that always please.

A heart than can feel for another's woe,
And share his joys with a genial glow—
With sympathies large enough to enfold
All men as brothers—is better than gold.

THANKSGIVING HYMN
(Tune: America)
God bless our native land!
Firm may she ever stand
Thru storms and night;
When the wild tempests rave,
Ruler of wind and wave
Do Thou our country save
By Thy great might.

For her our prayer shall rise
To God above the skies;
On Him we wait;
Thou who art ever nigh,
Guarding with watchful eye
To Thee aloud we cry,
God save the State!

Joliet Considers Self Liquidating Sewer Proposition

Cost of construction of sewers by special assessment being considered too expensive many municipalities are turning to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to borrow funds for such work on a self liquidating plan.

The city of Joliet is considering a sewage plant that would cost approximately $200,000 in addition to the purchase price of the land on which it would stand.

In the event that the city would secure the loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the loan would extend over a period of 20 years.

City authorities estimate that at least 10,000 pieces of property in the corporate limits connect with the sewer system. That would mean under the self liquidating plan, that each property owner would pay approximately $2.20 a year to retire the loan. The $2.20 would not be a special assessment, but a rental for the privilege of using the sewer.

City officials estimate that sewer improvements if done by special assessment would cost $5 per foot, and the costs would be prohibitive.

City dads frown on special assessments at this time. There are more than fifty sewer projects held up in Illinois because of lack of funds.

STORY FOR YOUNG FOLKS

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER RABBIT'S FEELINGS ARE HURT

Loafer, loafer at your ease
Learn a lesson from the bees!

THIS is what little Striped Chipmunk had shouted at Peter Rabbit when Peter tried to get him to come and play with him. Peter just grinned as he watched Striped Chipmunk scamper about on the edge of the Green Forest and presently start for home with the pockets of his cheeks stuffed with beechnuts. It seemed to Peter that it was no time at all before Striped Chipmunk was back after more nuts. It was very clear that he had no time for play; he was too busy.

Peter watched him a while, and then growing tired of seeing Striped Chipmunk work so hard he went on. Presently he spied Chatterer the Red Squirrel in a chestnut tree. "Come play with me!" cried Peter. "It's a splendid day for a frolic."

"You mean it's a splendid day to work," shouted Chatterer. "I can't afford to be a loafer like you." With this Chatterer stuffed his mouth full of nuts and whisked out of sight to hide them in his secret storehouse.

"Let's Play Hide-and-Seek!" Cried Peter.

Once more Peter grinned and went his way until he met Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel. "Let's play hide-and-seek!" cried Peter.

"Some other day," replied Happy Jack, hunting among the fallen leaves for nuts. "I can't afford to be a loafer like you such fine weather as this."

This time Peter didn't grin. It was the third time he had been called a loafer. At first he hadn't minded, but now he was beginning to feel a wee bit hurt. You know a loafer is one who sits around and does nothing. He never works. Peter could see no reason why he should work. He would much rather play or take his ease. He couldn't understand why others should work as they were doing, but that was their affair, not his. If they got pleasure from work all well and good but they needn't call him a loafer. He would leave them to their labor and go down to the Smiling Pool.

So he left the Green Forest and started across the Green Meadows lippy-lippy-lippy as fast as he could go to the Smiling Pool. By the time he got there he had quite forgotten that he had been a little hurt in his feelings. The instant he poked his head over the bank he saw Jerry

BUTTER SPREADS

WITH butter as a base, one may prepare various spreads that will add much to a sandwich; or made into butter balls and served with bread at the table, will add to any menu. With a crisp lettuce leaf or a slice or two of pickle or cucumber one has a tasty sandwich always on tap. The butters are kept in jars in the ice chest and will keep for some time.

Crab or Lobster Butter.

Pound to a paste one small can of lobster or crab, or its equivalent of cooked fresh fish. Season lightly with pepper. When using this butter for sandwich filling spread one slice of bread with mayonnaise and the other with the crab mixture, add a lettuce leaf or slice of cucumber and serve.

Sardine Butter.

Take one-fourth cupful of butter, four large sardines skinned and boned, and one teaspoonful of lemon juice. Pound these into a smooth paste. When using for sandwich filling spread one-half the bread with the paste and the other half with a thin layer of minced onion or mashed hard cooked egg.

Cheese Butter.

Mash together one-half cupful of American cheese and one-half cupful of butter. Spread one-half the sandwich with tart jelly and the other with the cheese mixture. Crackers or saltines may be used, and any snappy cheese.

Orange Butter.

Beat to a cream one-fourth pound of butter, the yolks of three eggs, one cupful of powdered sugar, the grated rind and juice of an orange. Cook over hot water, stirring all the time until the mixture is thick.

Shrimp Butter.

Take one cupful of cooked shrimps, salt and a few dashes of cayenne. Pound in a mortar, mix with an equal portion of butter and one-fourth cupful of lemon juice or tarragon vinegar to moisten.

Peanut Butter and Fruit.

Take one-fourth cupful of figs and raisins, two tablespoonfuls of light sirup, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-half cupful of peanut butter. Put the fruit in the food chopper, add the other ingredients and mix well.

Fans in the East

Fans have been made of many materials, feathers, tortoise shell, ivory, sandalwood, paper and many fabrics. In Japan there is a fan for almost every use one can think of, such as the tea fan, the court fan, the kitchen fan, and the dancing fan. The fan in Japan and China is not a part, merely, of feminine apparel, being an article of use carried by mistress, maid, priest and soldier.

Mother's Dream

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

MOTHER does not dream of fame
So much, how great, how far;
Mother thinks about your name,
Yet only what you are.
She would rather have you known
For kindness to a few,
Than to have you on a throne,
And have men hating you.

Mother does not dream of gold
So much, if great or small;
She would rather have you hold
Your honor first of all.
She would rather have you poor
Than have you rich in sin;
All the wealth that will endure
Is the wealth within.

Mother does not dream of place
So much, of social ends;
Gentle women, men of grace,
She would have your friends.
She would rather have you one
All you meet esteem.
Just a good and loving son—
That is Mother's dream.

Lesson for November 27

STEWARDSHIP OF LIFE

Mark 1:16-20; Acts 26:12-19; I Corinthians 9:16-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—And this they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God. II Corinthians 8:5.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Choosing a Worker.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Following the Leader.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Serving God Where We Are.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Living as God's Stewards.

By stewardship of life is meant the recognition of the fact that our personal being, including all of our powers, faculties and possessions—all that we have and are—belongs to God.

I. Four Fishermen Called to Stewardship (Mark 1:16-20).

1. Who they were (vv. 16, 19). Simon and Andrew, John and James; two pairs of brothers. It is usually wise to engage in the Lord's service in groups. This is not only desirable for effective testimony, but for needed fellowship on the part of the workers, and protection of the witnesses.

2. From what they were called (vv. 16, 20). These men were fishermen.

3. To what they were called (v. 17). They were to become fishers of men. The qualities which made them good fishermen were patience, courage to face the storm at night, and perseverance which led them to toil all night though no fish were caught. These qualities would make them good fishers of men.

4. The cost of obedience to Christ's call (vv. 18, 20). Obedience to Christ's call meant sacrifice and painful separation. It was to give up all business interest and leave their father.

5. Their reward (v. 17). Their names have become immortalized. Christ promised one hundred fold in this life and eternal life in the world to come.

II. Paul's Call to Stewardship (Acts 26:12-19).

1. His manner of life (vv. 1-12). In his defense before Agrippa he showed that he had been in the strictest accord with the most rigid sect of the Jews. He possessed the same hope of a coming Deliverer and reminded them of the fact that formerly he was most bitterly opposed to Christ.

2. His supernatural conversion (vv. 13-15). He declared that Christ had appeared and revealed himself to him on the way to Damascus.

3. Commissioned by Christ (vv. 16-18). He was sent to the Gentiles.

a. To open their eyes, which had been so awfully blinded.

b. To turn them from darkness to light.

c. To turn them from the power of Satan unto God.

d. That they might receive forgiveness of sins.

e. That they might obtain an inheritance among the saints.

4. His consecration (vv. 19-23). As soon as he received his commission, he rendered instant obedience.

III. Paul Impressing Stewardship Upon the Corinthians (I Cor. 9:16-27). The Corinthians were an intemperate and dissolute people. The surest and most effective way to combat vice is to inculcate virtue.

1. Paul's own life and example (vv. 19-23). Though free from all men he made himself servant unto all. He most rigorously limited himself in order to gain others for Christ.

2. The Isthmian Games (vv. 24-27). Paul uses these popular games to illustrate the need of self-control. He showed that man was redeemed for a purpose. Those who would apprehend that purpose must possess a definite motive. He shows:

a. Life is a race (vv. 24-25). In order to win a prize there must be self-denial, and definite self-exertion. The Christian obtains life by contact with Jesus Christ through faith (John 3:16; John 3:35; John 5:24). This life must be possessed before he can begin the race. While he gets salvation, (life) at the beginning, God places before him definite rewards as incentives for exertion. The Christian believes for salvation but works for rewards. As the racer in these games abstains from everything that might hinder him, so the Christian will make any sacrifice in order to win. If the heathen would practice such self-denial for a garland of laurel, certainly the Christian should turn from all bodily indulgences to obtain the crown of righteousness which fadeth not away.

b. The Christian's life is a fight (vv. 26-27). His efforts are not merely beatings of the air. He has a real antagonist. In order to win success, his body must be kept in subjection. The believer has a severe struggle with his carnal nature.

The old Indian's eyes snapped with humor. "He don't spik noding; he sen' for Esau."

"What'd you do, Esau?"

Esau puffed for a space, his eyes on his moccasins; then he said: "Mak-wa, de beeg shaman, mak' medicine no more."

Stuart leaned forward curiously. "You chased him out of the country?"

The old man shook his head. Stuart turned to Omar, who chuckled: "Esau nevaire tell, but Makwa come to Wolf riviere to trade next tam widout hees ear. Ah-hah! He no good for shaman after he lose hees ear."

"You mean they were cut off?"

Omar nodded. "Widout dem he was no good to mak' de medicine."

Stuart glanced doubtfully at the sphinxlike Esau.

"Do you intend to cut off Jingwak's ears, Esau?" he laughed. "That will be some job! They're a wild lot up there in the Pipestone country; they might cut off yours—or worse."

The lean face of the old Ojibwa shaped a cryptic smile as he rose with a grunt and went out to visit the gill-nets below the post.

"Do you believe the old rascal actually cut off the medicine-man's ears?" Stuart demanded of the grinning Omar.

"No one know. Esau nevaire tell."

"But the shaman, you say, lost his magic with his ears?"

"Ah-hah! All de Jibwa laugh at heem affair dat."

"Well, I'll say that's a great yarn, anyway. But what do you suppose Esau meant when he said he'd put the devil into Jingwak?"

The half-breed shrugged. "I don't know. De fader of Esau was a shaman, a sorcerer. Esau, mebbe, got frien' among de devil."

His supplies and trade-goods properly checked and stowed away against the coming of the Ojibwas for the Christmas trade, Stuart prepared to follow the freight canoes, with his fur from the spring trade, down to Lake Expance, the headquarters of the district. There he would listen, in sullen silence, while his chief, Andrew Christie, talked deep into the night of the failure of Sunset House to obtain its share of the trade. With endless reiteration the stiff-necked inspector would dwell on the cost of building the post and its small yearly returns in fur while Jim, raging inwardly, endured in silence. And, from the increasing stiffness in the manner of his chief, the discouraged Stuart knew that the end of Sunset House would mean the end of his advancement in the Company's service. For a failure is a failure. The fact that he had been chosen to lead a forlorn hope—that Sunset House was doomed from the beginning, would be forgotten. He would have had his chance. If he stayed with the Hudson's Bay, they would send him somewhere as clerk, assistant to a luckier man.

But the journey to Lake Expance would consume a fortnight, and the thought of what might await him behind a certain split rock on an island ten miles across the unruffled surface of Mitawangagama led him to postpone his start with Omar.

The spell of the northern summer was on cloudless sky; the dusky, spruce green of the ridges; the cool depths of the translucent lake, as Jim paddled alongshore toward the sturgeon set-lines at the outlet, to deceive the sharp eyes which followed his departure from the post. Then with a savage lunge his paddle tore the water to foam. Across the lake they laughed at the name, Sunset House, did they? So they held the whole Pipestone and Sturgeon river trade by bribing a sorcerer! Well, as Omar said, there were ways of handling a shaman. Esau was an old hand at that game. He and Omar should have their wish. They would go to the summer camps of the Pipestone Lake Indians—carry the war into the enemies' country. Jim Stuart's future as a fur-man was at stake. He'd played fair, but now all rules were off and henceforth there'd be no quarter.

Then his anger cooled as he thought of the girl whose message he was paddling ten miles to look for at the split rock. A reckless game, this, he admitted. Some day she'd be seen and followed. They, even, might be caught! Then what? He laughed aloud at the thought. Well, she was worth it—this bewildering daughter of LeBlond.

It was mid-forenoon when the birch-bark of Jim Stuart approached the split rock on the stony beach of the island. Stepping from the canoe, Jim's eager eyes searched the bushes behind the rock for the telltale white of the note which she had promised to leave. Then, lying under a stone, he saw to his surprise a folded sheet ruled, as if torn from a small note book. It did not seem like her—this soiled scrap of paper at his feet. Puzzled, he picked it up and read:

"This is your first and last warning. Louis LeBlond will see that there are no more love notes here for you. The next time you come for a letter you'll get lead."

The note was written in pencil in an immature hand and unsigned.

FROM THE BEGINNING

From his fur post, Sunset House, in the Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in charge, with his headman, Omar, rescues a girl from an overturned canoe in the lake. She is Aureole LeBlond, daughter of Stuart's rival in the fur business, and proves to be a charming companion. In a spirit of fun, she and Jim arrange to exchange notes on a certain island. LeBlond, with Paradis, his half-breed lieutenant, arrives in search of the missing girl. Paradis displays enmity toward Jim, though LeBlond acknowledges his debt of gratitude to Sunset House.

"Paradis!"

He had followed her canoe at a distance, and, finding her note, had left this. And now LeBlond would not allow her out of his sight—would watch her as a lynx watches a rabbit. Jim Stuart had seen the last of the girl who had filled the living room at Sunset House with laughter—whose departure had left him lonely, vaguely restless, puzzled with himself.

Nice dog in the manger, this Paradis! The head man of LeBlond had only run true to form in spying on the girl who laughed at him. Then the angered Stuart rasped aloud: "Get lead, eh, if I come again? If I could meet Monsieur Paradis here, I'd come tomorrow!"

"Weel today do?" From the thick spruce in his rear a voice wheeled Jim in his tracks, as Paradis appeared in the brush back of the canoe, carrying a gun. Stuart was unarmed. With evident satisfaction, Paradis leered at the man who watched him.

"Well, Monsieur Stuart, here ees Paradis!" he taunted. "You have your weesh. What weel the writer of love notes do about eet?"

"You're a pretty specimen of a man, Paradis," said Jim coolly, refusing to take the situation seriously. "You swing a gun on me, then ask me what I intend to do. Drop that gun and come down here on the beach, if you're not afraid, and I'll show you what I'll do about it."

"Ah, he boasts." Paradis grinned in derision.

"Well, there's only one way to call a bluff," drawled Jim. "You hold the cards. It's your play."

"Yes, it ees my play." As Paradis bent with laughter, Jim edged a yard nearer. "But I have not made up my mind weder to shoot you for de insult you give me—or take you to Louis LeBlond and let you taste de sting of Black Jules' dog-whip."

At the fantastic threat the hard-thinked Stuart grinned in derision, but the situation was not humorous. Was this wild-eyed Paradis, fingering the trigger of his rifle, fifteen feet away, unbalanced over the girl—or drunk? Either condition was equally dangerous with that gun.

"Shoot me, eh?" Jim scoffed, sliding a moccasin a foot nearer the man who covered him. "You'd hang, if my man, Omar, didn't get you first, and they'd run the North-West Trading company out of the bush." Then an idea flashed through his active brain as the inflamed eyes of Paradis glared at him. "Take me to LeBlond. It's his daughter. Let him settle it."

"I settle my own affair." The face of Paradis was distorted with passion. Slowly he brought the rifle to his shoulder.

Stuart's heart started with a leap. The man was crazed! He would shoot! With a desperate bound Jim strained to reach the madman—to deflect his miss him. Then, sucking in a deep breath, Jim deliberately folded his arms over his chest, and taking a desperate chance, challenged: "All right, I'm ready! Now—right through the heart!"

For a space the black tube covered the chest of the man whose eyes did not waver. "Your arm is een de way. De shot weel not be a clean one," muttered the man whose finger slowly curled on the trigger.

Jim Stuart's straight gaze held the grimacing face behind the black tube sighted on his laboring heart, but doubt slowly chilled him. Had he misjudged his man? Did Paradis, after all, intend to murder him? Slowly, under the strain, the sweat broke from his forehead. Better to take the chances of a rush than to be shot like a spy against a wall. Then, as Jim stiffened for a headlong leap, with a laugh Paradis dropped his gun butt.

"Now we go an' see Louis LeBlond."

Jim let the breath out of his lungs. It had seemed minutes, while he looked into that gun muzzle. It had taken all the nerve he had. But it had worked—that trick; or was Paradis merely baiting him?

"Get into your boat! Take de stern and paddle! If you move, I shoot you for sure!" ordered Paradis.

Jim did as he was told. Facing him, with the gun in his hands, Paradis squatted in the bow of the boat, and they started along the shallows of the shore.

"You think you are luckee I deed not shoot you, Monsieur Stuart de Hudson's Bay; but when Louis LeBlond hear you come to meet hees daughter—den you weesh I shoot. Dat beeg dog-whip of Jules—ah! I can hear it seeng now. Crack! She go on your back!"

The threats of Paradis fell on deaf ears. Jim was not worrying over LeBlond. But he did not relish the humiliation of being brought into the post by the unbalanced Paradis. He pictured the mirth in the eyes of Aureole LeBlond. But as for the jealous and demented Paradis, he almost pitied him. There would be no mercy when she learned how he had spied upon her movements. And LeBlond? She'd laugh at him, as she did that night at Sunset House.

Beyond the island of the split rock, across a half-mile of quiet water, lay another and larger one. As Jim paddled leisurely, ignoring the abuse of the man squatted in the bow, holding his rifle, he wondered whether this strait was visible from LeBlond's place on the mainland.

"You didn't tell me how far your place is from here," he said, as the water began to boil behind his paddle.

"Tree-four mile. Not far. Don't hurry. Louis LeBlond, he weel soon enough teach you to come sneaking 'round de south shore for de love letter." Paradis laughed uproariously.

Then, as the man in the bow lurched forward and jerked himself to an upright position, Jim suddenly realized that he was not mad, but drunk.

On his knees, Stuart rapidly drove the light birchbark out into the strait with his brisk stroke. From LeBlond's canoe could not be seen! With a lurch of his heavy body, Jim rolled the light canoe over as he plunged into the lake.

As the speeding canoe capsized, with a cry the surprised Paradis slid headlong into the water as his rifle exploded. Rising beyond reach of the boat, for an instant he beat the water desperately; then sank.

Great Things Hoped of Exploration in Mexico

Egyptology carries its devotees back to a profound antiquity in comparison with which all the remains of Mexico seem almost modern. But Egyptian history is known and written, while not only the history but also the ethnology of early Mexico remain mysteries. For example, the Quiche of Guatemala and the Maya of Yucatan, whose great temples and cities may appear similar to the uninitiated, were in reality distinct peoples, and they both had languages which seem wholly unrelated to the language of the Aztecs of Mexico. It is not wide of the mark to assert that "Mexicology," if such a word may be coined, is still in its infancy despite the remarkable discoveries and erudite studies of the savants.

away with a stiff left arm, Jim sucked in a deep breath and sank beneath the surface; then, as he rose, struck the gasping man fiercely in the face. The fingers which clutched Stuart's shirt relaxed, and he pushed the half-conscious trader to the boat floating bottom up.

"Now, can you hear that dog-whip sing?" he laughed. But the man Jim held beside the overturned canoe was too busy coughing up water to hear—too frightened to answer.

"You're a clever man with the Indians, Paradis, but there're some tricks you don't know," taunted Jim, as he swam beside the boat. "Look out! You'll roll into the lake if you move!" he warned, as the dazed passenger lifted a livid face to the man in the water.

At last they reached the shore, and wading to the beach with the man who had ambushed him, Jim dropped him none too tenderly.

"Now, what are you going to tell LeBlond, when you can walk and are able to find your boat which you have hidden somewhere on this shore?" he asked of the hiccupping Paradis propped on his elbow, his red eyes picturing his fear of what awaited him at the hands of the Hudson's Bay man.

Paradis weakly shook his head.

"You deserve a good north country beating, my friend, for throwing that gun on me. You might have pulled that trigger. But for spying on Miss Aureole, you deserve—I'll take this." Stuart suddenly bent over the shivering Paradis, who shrank from the blow he anticipated, and jerked a knife from its sheath on the other's belt. "Yes," Jim went on, "you deserve getting this between your ribs for following her out here, and I'm going to let you have it." With a black scowl Jim drew back the skinning knife and thrust savagely at the helpless man at his feet. The mottled face of Paradis went white, as he shrank from the blow. But the shining blade stopped inches from his ribs.

"Look Out! You'll Roll Into the Lake If You Move!"

"How d'yuh like that, my brave beauty? Not so nice when the other man has the whip hand, eh?"

"Don't! don't!" whimpered the man on the beach, too weak to move. "I onlee play wid you—I nevaire shoot!"

"Well, the least I can do is to cut a birch whip and give you what you promised I'd get."

But Stuart had had enough of this head man of LeBlond's. The yellowness of spirit of the one who, an hour before, had held a rifle on his heart, disgusted him. And across the lake Omar was waiting.

"Just remember one thing, Paradis," he said, "when you lie about what happened this morning—I didn't let you down when I had good reason to. From now on, between you and me there'll be war. You've started to put me out of business—you and LeBlond; but before you're through you'll know you've been in a fight. Now go back and tell them a cock-and-bull yarn about what happened to you!"

Turning from the surprised Paradis, Jim stepped into his boat and started for Sunset House. As he passed the split rock, he suddenly swung the canoe with a sweep of his paddle and started furiously back up the shore. Her note? Paradise must have it in his pocket. It could be dried and read.

But when Jim reached the strip of beach where he had left his man, it was empty.

STUDY SHOWS U. S. TELEPHONES LEAD

Our Cities Outrank Others on Per Capita Basis

San Francisco ranks first among the leading cities of the world in telephone development, having a greater percentage of telephones to population than any other large city: 40.2 telephones for every hundred persons.

Next to San Francisco comes Washington, D. C., with a percentage of 34.0, followed by Seattle with 31.8 and Denver with 31.7. Other American cities having a high average are: Los Angeles, with 30.4; Omaha, 29.3; Chicago, 28.7; Minneapolis, 26.8; New York, 25.5; and Pittsburgh, 23.4.

Stockholm Ranks First on Continent

The leading city outside the United States in telephone development, on the last date for which comparable figures are available, was Stockholm, Sweden, which has a percentage of 31.2 telephones. The leading Canadian city, from the standpoint of telephone development, is Toronto, which averages 28.2 telephones per each hundred of its population. Montreal has a telephone development of 20.6.

In Europe, Oslo ranks next to Stockholm. Paris does not have nearly so many telephones as London, but on a percentage basis ranks considerably ahead of the British metropolis. Berlin also has a commanding lead over London, and while it exceeds Paris in actual number of telephones by some 125,000, the per capita telephone development in Paris is slightly greater.

In Hungary, Budapest is the leading city in telephones per hundred of population, and in Italy, Milan leads both Rome and Genoa. Swiss cities show a higher telephone development than do the majority of the continental countries, Zurich, Berne, Basel and Geneva all ranking nearly twice as high as London in telephone development, in relation to population.

Group Figures Show High Totals

In the United States, a total of eight cities with over a million population show a total of 4,875,830 telephones, or 2.49 per hundred inhabitants. Ten United States cities, with populations between 500,000 and 1,000,000, possess 1,605,282 telephones; and thirty-four cities, with populations between 200,000 and 500,000, have 2,204,289 telephones. A total of fifty-two cities in the United States, with more than 200,000 population, have 8,635,401 telephones, which is equal to 23.6 telephones for each one hundred people. Only two foreign cities, Stockholm and Toronto, show greater telephone development.

TELEPHONE BOOK BRINGS ABOUT BROTHERS' MEETING

Joseph Lanzner, of Chicago, met his older brother, William, in Newark, N. J., for the first time the other day, because he picked up a telephone directory at a hotel in New York City, where he was stopping. The two brothers had spent the last quarter century vaguely conscious of each other's existence.

For Years Had Sought Brother Whom He Had Never Seen

Joseph remembered, for example, that when he was a child in Chicago, where he was born, his father had told him of his brother, who had been left in Vienna with his grandfather. On the other hand, William had heard his grandparents tell of his father and mother, who had gone to America, where his little brother was born. But with the passage of time, the Lanzners had lost track of each other.

William Lanzner came to this country in 1905. Joseph, who had tried to locate him, learned that his brother was here, but that was all he had been able to discover, after advertisements in papers from coast to coast had failed to locate him. When Joseph came to New York on business, he decided to do what he had often done before in other cities; that is, to go through the telephone book and call up the various Lanzners in it.

Finds Brother's Name in Book Chosen by Mistake

This time Joseph made a mistake, and picked up a suburban telephone directory instead of the New York directory. Finding the name of William Lanzner, a clothier in Newark, he called him up, to discover that it was the long lost brother. A meeting was soon arranged at the hotel.

Size of Stock Show

To Exceed All Its

Past Records

Exceeding its own past records in size and significance the continent's foremost congress of American agriculture will soon be under way when the International Live Stock Exposition opens its doors at the Chicago Stock Yards November 26 to December 3.

For the past thirty-two years, this famous show, held since its inception the week following Thanksgiving holiday, has marked the year's progress in American livestock farming and each year has set a new pace and higher goals for livestockmen.

In consequence, according to B. H. Heide, veteran manager of the Exposition, it has grown in magnitude and importance with each passing year as it has marked the close and climax of the American livestock show season.

Officials of the coming International Live Stock Show make the remarkable announcement that it will be the largest in all departments in the history of the show.

The three breeds of cattle, the Shorthorn, the Aberdeen-Angus and the Hereford, that furnish the bulk of the world's choicest beef, will be revealed to visitors to the show this year in greater numbers than ever before, it being the half century jubilee celebration of the organization of these three breed associations in America.

Low round trip excursion fares will be granted by all railroads entering Chicago during the week of the Live Stock Show.

ORLAND PARK

Former Mayor Harry Cox has been quite seriously ill the past week.

The program put on by the Orland Park school Achievement Club last Thursday night drew a capacity house and was much enjoyed.

The state highway department is having snow fences erected along the paved roads in this section.

The basketball fever is beginning to be felt in Orland Park and a town team is being organized. The high school team is also preparing for a series of games with teams in surrounding towns.

Mayor Wm. Kollman returned on Sunday morning about six o'clock from a hunting trip to Iowa.

In company with Fred Jaffke and Martin Strassburg of Aurora and Tony Stary of Chicago, Mayor Kollman left here last Tuesday night at 9:30 o'clock during a heavy snow storm. When the party reached De Kalb the snow had ceased falling and from there on to Iowa no snow was encountered. The party arrived in Iowa the next morning at 5:30 o'clock. After a few hours rest the party continued on to their hunting field, which is over 500 miles from here. The trip was very profitable. The party bagged 15 pheasants, 3 wild ducks, 30 rabbits, 6 jack rabbits.

Mr. Kollman says the farmers in Iowa are harder hit by the depression than here. Being farther away from a big market like Chicago they cannot dispose of their products and have nothing left after paying for transportation charges and commission. Oats and corn are only bringing 9 cents a bushel. Stock is very cheap. Turkeys were selling for 20c a pound dressed. A crate of chickens weighing 200 pounds bring approximately $16. Eggs, however, seem to hold their own, selling for 25c a dozen. Mr. Kollman had a number of turkeys shipped here.

Bank failures have added to the heavy burden on the Iowa farmers, many of whom have lost everything.

The village board will meet next Monday night.

There has been a demand for turkeys in this section. Some of the farmers have been getting 32c a pound for turkeys.

Many of the Will county students who are attending the University of Illinois this semester are home for the Thanksgiving recess. Will county, according to the University Registrar, has 90 students enrolled in the State's highest educational institution.

stitution.

This year every county in the state has students enrolled in the University! Cook county, as usual, leads all others in total enrollment in the Urbana-Champaign departments with 2,712 students. An additional 873 Cook county students attend the University's Colleges of Medicine, Dentistry, and Pharmacy in Chicago.

The next largest group enrolled is that of Champaign county. There are 1242 sons and daughters from the home county. This is due to the University's location within the county and because so many families move to the twin cities during the time their children are in the University.

Altogether 11 counties have more than 100 representatives in the University.

Those from Mokena are: Harold Geuther and Almira Koeller.

Youthful Wine-Bibbers

School teachers in the Hungarian village of Lentihegy were shocked when their young pupils, some of them only five or six years old, staggered to their desks, began to bawl and shout and give every evidence of being drunk. They were. The village well, its only source of water supply, had dried up, and the children drank the rich Tokay wine of the district instead. Wine is cheaper than water in some parts of Hungary, and several cases have been reported recently of wine being used to put out fires.

"Electric Chair" for Insects

An "electric chair" for mosquitoes and other insects and pests was recently devised at a tree research laboratory. The "chair" is a large square with two sides made of extremely fine wire. A current is passed through these sides, killing all insects alighting thereon. A weak current is used, running from an electric bulb socket through a transformer into the wire gauze. During the day, bait is used to attract the insects; at night, a light is placed inside the "chair."—New York Times.

Bronchial Troubles Need Creomulsion

Bronchial troubles may lead to something serious. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Secretary, Illinois Press Association

Lloyd Morey, comptroller of the University of Illinois, states that expenditures for the operation of the university for the first quarter of the fiscal year ended September 30, were approximately $200,000, or 13 per cent less, than expenditures for the same period a year ago. Forty-six per cent of the appropriation for the present biennium, Morey said, had been expended to September 30. The biennium includes eight quarters, five of which have been completed.

Emergency action by the legislature to provide funds for the unemployed will again be necessary when the general assembly reconvenes November 14, Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Illinois emergency relief commission, has declared. The $3,000,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance corporation will take care of November only. With two weeks between the time of reconvening of the legislature and the first of December when the present funds will be exhausted, Mr. Reynolds has pointed out that an emergency program, requiring a two-thirds vote, must be constructed and put through.

The state and county highway systems of Illinois were extended 69.61 miles during the week that ended October 19, Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, has announced.

The state department of public works and building has announced its approval of five county highway construction contracts that authorize the expenditure of $25,081.85 of the gasoline tax allotments to Franklin, Grundy, Hancock, Kane and Lawrence counties.

Mailing of applications for 1933 Illinois auto license plates started the latter part of the week ending November 5 from the office of Secretary of State William J. Stratton and will continue through November 15. Motorists desiring to retain their license number of this year must submit their applications by December 1, in accordance with custom. Color of this year's plates will be white numerals on a blue background.

Miss Dorsey Connors, Chicago, and William P. Coppell, Havana, played the leading roles in the Mask and Bauble Dramatic society production, "The Butter and Egg Man," given during the annual Dad's day week-end on the University of Illinois campus.

A sizeable improvement in the banking situation in Illinois has been announced by States Auditor Oscar Nelson. "A compilation of figures as obtained from the call reports of the 782 banks under the jurisdiction of the state banking department at the close of business September 30," the auditor said, "indicates a more satisfactory position than has been reflected for some time."

The state division of architecture and engineering has under consideration bids from ten companies for reconstruction of thirteen cabins at Old Salem state park. The apparent low bidder was English Brothers of Champaign. This company built the grand stand at the state fair grounds and remodeled Lincoln's tomb at Springfield.

Successful bidders for state contracts for 323,050 tons of Illinois-mined coal to be delivered prior to next July 1 have been announced. The contracts totaled $1,000,000.

Heavy flights of Canadian geese have been wending their way southward through portions of Illinois within past weeks with the result that hunters in the state have been having good shooting. Director Ralph F. Bradford of the department of conservation indicates in a statement recently issued.

Collections from counties on their second installment of 1931 taxes has helped the state's finances and is making possible retirement of a large sum of anticipation notes, it has been announced at the office of State Auditor Oscar Nelson. During October anticipation notes were retired in the sum of $775,000. Of the total of $1,100,000 in notes issued during lean months to operate the University of Illinois, all but $60,000 have been retired. Reserves now on hand will permit the retirement of this last amount soon. Additional retirements will also be made.

William H. Green, master in chancery of Jefferson county, a former Circuit judge, state's attorney and member of the Illinois legislature, died on October 28 at Mount Vernon. He was seventy-four years old.

Roland Courtney, fifteen, Cuba high school student, was shot in the face accidentally by a younger brother while the boys and friends were hunting in the woods near Cuba.

Courage

To pick yourself up after you have slipped or been knocked down is the mark of a successful man. Marcus Aurelius said: "Be not uneasy or out of humor because practice falls short of precept in some things. If you happen to be beaten, return to the charge."—Grit.

With more heavy building machinery mobilized on the site than has ever been brought together by any building project since the World war, the Century of Progress exposition at Chicago has launched a $2,000,000 construction program in preparation for its official opening next June 1, 1933. Immediate employment will be given to approximately 1,000 men, bringing the number engaged on exposition construction to nearly 3,000.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, in commenting on the results of the recent sale at auction of $2,000,000 of state highway bonds for $1,983,500, expressed his satisfaction at the amount the state is to receive for the bonds. The price received exceeds the average rate for the entire state bond issue and also represents a much better price than that obtained at the last preceding auction, held in September, 1929. The proceeds of these bonds, it is stated, are needed for current payments on construction contracts and the money will be put to work immediately.

Forms and operating policies developed by the Illinois emergency relief commission in administering relief on a state-wide basis are being used as models by the state of Minnesota in organizing for state-wide relief. Paul V. Betters, executive secretary of the American Municipal association, acquainted the Minnesota representative with the procedures used by the Illinois commission. He reports that the Illinois set-up is being used as a model by other states which are organizing for state-wide relief.

County boards may be compelled by mandamus to have an audit made of the books of all county officials handling county funds, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has advised State's Attorney C. D. Matthews of Wayne county.

Facing the necessity of building a $190,000 lift bridge over the Illinois river at Seneca, to comply with an order of the secretary of war in development of the Illinois waterway, the owners and operators of the Kankakee & Seneca railroad have petitioned the Illinois commerce commission for permission to abandon, dismantle and sell their railroad. The road runs from Kankakee through Grundy county to Seneca, a distance of 43 miles. It is owned by the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific and the New York Central railroads.

The prompt passage of housing legislation now before the Illinois general assembly provides the only means of using available federal money for housing projects. Absence of such legislation is the only obstacle to the use of such moneys. The interest of the taxpayer, as well as the interest of the unemployed, make it imperative that Illinois should act in order to qualify for immediate application for loans for building construction, which would in turn lead to the creation of jobs.

Declaring that individual responsibility for assisting the unemployed still exists, despite the relief work being done by state and county agencies, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has urged the citizens of Illinois to contribute to the annual roll call of the American Red Cross to be held November 11 to November 24.

New bids, received on November 4 by the department of purchases and construction for the construction of a superstructure for a bridge at Ottawa and one at Joliet over the Illinois waterway, requires a statement showing the rate of wages to be paid for skilled labor and common field labor as well as an indication to what extent Illinois labor will be employed. Bids previously submitted were rejected, according to Director H. H. Kohn of the department.

Bids for 159.95 miles of paving, 42.84 miles of grading and 20 bridge sections, opened by the state department of public works and buildings recently, call for a total of $3,621,454.65 worth of work, according to a tabulation made by state highway engineers. Apparently satisfactory proposals in this letting indicate that the cost of paving is to average $19,676 per mile, including the cement, which will be furnished by the state. In all there are 48 projects and the work is well scattered over Illinois.

Secretary of State William J. Stratton's office has collected $20,169,295.88 in fees the first ten months of this year, including $16,935,303.70 in the automobile department and $3,158,739.55 in the corporation department. Mr. Stratton has earned and turned into the state treasury $41,686.17 in interest on state funds collected.

State headquarters of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will be moved from Danville to Springfield about December 1.

The latest weekly report of contagious diseases issued by the state department of public health shows 284 cases of scarlet fever, 112 cases of diphtheria and 414 cases of chickenpox.

Cheerfulness

You find yourself refreshed by the presence of cheerful people. Why not make earnest effort to confer that pleasure on others? You will find half the battle is gained if you never allow yourself to say anything gloomy. —L. M. Child.

Stronger than He Was at Twenty

FIFTY-FIVE years old, and still going strong!

Do you want the secret of such vitality? It isn't what you eat, or any tonic you take. It's something anyone can do—something you can start today and see results in a week! All you do is give your vital organs the right stimulant.

A famous doctor discovered the way to stimulate a sluggish system to new energy. It brings fresh vigor to every organ. Being a physician's prescription, it's quite harmless. Tell your druggist you want a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Get the benefit of its fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and that pure pepsin. Get that lazy liver to work, those stagnant bowels into action. Get rid of waste matter that is slow poison so long as it is permitted to remain in the system.

The new energy men and women feel before one bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin has been used up is proof of how much the system needs this help.

Get a bottle of this delicious syrup and let it end that constant worry about the condition of the bowels. Spare the children those bilious days that make them miserable. Save your household from the use of cathartics which lead to chronic constipation. And guard against auto-intoxication as you grow older.

Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin is such a well known preparation you can get it wherever drugs are sold and it isn't expensive.

Measure for Life's Span

Sir William Mulock, speaking jocularly at a banquet in Orillia, remarked that the best way to live a long time is to select good healthy parents. As a matter of fact, the best rough-and-ready test of a person's probable span of life is to add together the ages of parents and grandparents and divide it by six.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Scientists feed 50 babies...

to help you feed yours

YOU can't nurse your baby? Then read of a recent feeding test conducted by two eminent baby specialists.

Let their findings help you decide—what milk for my baby.

For a test, fifty average babies were chosen. Into their bottles—through the months of the test—went a milk known to millions of mothers and grandmothers in this country as a wonderful baby builder.

That milk was Eagle Brand. Eagle Brand was the only food these babies received, except for the usual supplementary foods* now given even with mother's milk.

And how those babies were studied! Regularly, X-Ray pictures of bones were taken. Tooth development was watched. Weights and heights recorded. Blood counts made. And all these results were compared with other groups of babies, similarly fed on other foods.

What the test showed

At last came the verdict: Measured by every scientific test, the result was favorable to Eagle Brand. This simple diet—Eagle Brand with the usual supplementary foods*—had proved equal to the building of 100% babies.

Send for FREE baby booklet

If you cannot nurse your baby, try Eagle Brand. Next to mother's milk, it is the easiest form of milk in the world to digest.

Millions of babies have been raised on it—babies whose strong, healthy constitutions—sound teeth—straight bones—firm muscles—are living proof of its benefits.

Just follow simple directions on label. And send for "Baby's Welfare", an 80-page guide-book on raising a baby.

A report of the physicians' test will be sent your doctor, on request.

*The usual supplementary foods, of course, are orange or tomato juice, and cod liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic vitamin D.

TINLEY GARDEN CLUB THE 1932 GRANDMOTHER

My grandmother looks as young as my ma,
And sometimes steps out with a friend of my pa's;
Her hair is all curled, her dress
is a dream.
She smokes cigarettes with the air of a queen.
I'm told she can dance in the late-est of style
And after that's over, ride many a mile
To a place that is called the Eatmore
Cafe
Where she dines with the crowd,
until dawn of next day.
Of course I don't know, but I've heard people say.
That grandmas have changed a lot
since their day.
Now when they were young, dear
grandmas were old,
And never did any thing folks could call bold.
Their dresses were long, their aprons
pure white,
And they went to bed after supper
each night.
They always wore caps, and three cornered shawls,
But I never saw such things hung up in our hall.
Now, my grandmother wears a fur
coat of gray
And it's lined with rose satin, yes,
all of the way.

Then over her hair that used to be white,
She pulls a chic hat, at an angle
just right.
Her gloves are of kid; her slippers are silk.
And she wears hand made flowers
that never can wilt.
Her beads are jade green; her earrings are long.
And she walks with a swing as she sings a new song.
Her nails are rose-pink, just tipped off with white.
She really is lovely when dressed
with joy.
Talk about thrills, why she vibrates
with joy,
And I'm mighty glad that my DAD,
was her boy.

—Trudie N. Swisher
The Tinley Park Garden Club met at the home of Mrs. R. Hug on Thursday, November 17th. About 20 members being present. Mrs. Hug's mother, Mrs. Donke was a most welcome guest. The meeting was opened with the reading of an essay on the Palm Tree by Mrs. John Funk. Mrs.
Combs then read an essay on the Ash Tree and also the legend of the Ash.

Mrs. Clara Goessel our president was delightfully surprised with a basket of "floral" greetings. Each member read her greeting and then inserted it into one of the slits which were cut in a large paper basket.

The basket looked charming when it was finished. Mrs. Trudie Swisher then read the poem at the head of this article.

Reports of committees were given
A report on the Junior Garden Club
Minstrel Show was given by Mrs.
Hug.

After the meeting delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

Note— Now kiddies, I will have some good news for you soon, so ther announcements.
